The Victoria Clipper: STEM

The ship on which you are cruising is named in honour of the many-masted clipper ships that were designed by the Americans in the mid-nineteenth century for their trade with China, to ensure that their precious cargos of tea arrived in London in the freshest condition possible. Very fast for their day, they travelled between 13 and 14 knots (nautical miles) per hour, reducing the 85- to 100-day trip by 10 to 14 days. Some of those ships that made Victoria their home port have been commemorated on bronze plaques along the Causeway, the promenade that lines the Inner Harbour in front of the Empress Hotel and the Parliament Buildings.

The Victoria Clipper is one of the world's largest catamarans, and the only faster boats in the Puget Sound belong to the U.S. Military.

Average speed of the Victoria Clipper ships over the 71-mile voyage between Victoria and Seattle is 25 to 30 knots (about 28 to 34 miles per hour), enabling them to complete the journey in as little as two and a half hours — just about the time it takes before you need that fresh cup of tea.

CLIPPER II

A modification of the original design of Clipper has opened up the front panelling to allow passengers on the main deck a panoramic view of the islands, mountains and ocean, and it is not unusual to spot whales, seals, sea lions and porpoises. The Clipper's two sister ships, a ferry in Mexico and a gaming ship in Florida, do without the view.

From the upper deck of Clipper, you can observe the master, mate and chief engineer at work on the bridge, surrounded by the most up-to-date navigational aids: radars, gyrocompass, log, echosounder and autopilot. Because so little of the ship is below the waterline, it is remarkably easy to handle and provides a very smooth ride. At the rear of the upper cabin, a door exits to a sundeck that affords a view of the impressive wake left by the two jet engines. At the end of your voyage, if you're interested, you may enter the bridge to inspect the equipment and talk to the master.

Because so little of the ship is below the waterline, it is remarkably easy to handle and provides a very smooth ride.

The five- to 10-member cabin crew will be serving food and drinks during your cruise, and they and the tour director will answer any questions you have about the Clipper ships, the voyage or your destination.

Thank you for joining us aboard the Victoria Clipper. We hope to see you again soon. □

Along the Way

We've detailed the following points of interest to make your trip more meaningful. The information is presented for a Seattle-to-Victoria trip. If you're travelling from Victoria to Seattle, start at the end of the guide and read to the beginning. Times given are approximate; bracketed times are for the reverse trip. Please feel free to ask any other questions you may have about the route.

A

The city of Seattle, named after Chief Sealth, was built on Elliot Bay in Puget Sound. On the south end of the bay is Alki Point, where the first white settlers arrived in 1851. On the north end is West Point, once a large Shilshole Indian settlement. Puget Sound was named after Peter Puget, a second lieutenant under George Vancouver, who explored this area in 1792. During this trip, Vancouver and Puget named many of the landmarks along the Sound's 1,000-mile coastline.

Clipper docks in the hearts of downtown Seattle, above, and Victoria.

B 15 minutes (2 hours, 15 minutes)

As we make the turn around West Point, we pass Bainbridge Island to the west, named after Commodore William Bainbridge, captain of the U.S.S. Constitution during the War of 1812.

C 30 minutes (2 hours)

To the west we pass the town of Kingston; to the east, the city of Edmonds.

The Washington State ferry departs from Edmonds, Washington.

This freighter skirts the south end of Marrowstone Island, in Puget Sound. Fort Flagler lies at the north end of the island.

D 45 minutes (1 hour, 45 minutes)

To the west is Point No Point, named by Lt. Charles Wilkes, the first American to explore this area for the U.S. Navy in 1841. To the east is Possession Point, on the southern tip of Whidbey Island. Both points are popular fishing spots. Whidbey Island was named by George Vancouver to honour the captain of his flagship, H.M.S. Discovery. Whidbey is 46 miles long.

E 60 minutes (1 hour, 30 minutes)

At this time we enter Admiralty Inlet, which Vancouver named for his superiors at the British Board of Admiralty. On the west are Foulweather Bluff and the entrance to Hood Canal.

F 1 hour, 15 minutes (1 hour, 15 minutes)

To the west we pass along Marrowstone Island. On the north end of the island at Marrowstone Point is Fort Flagler, one of three forts built in the "triangle of fire" across Puget Sound at the start of the Spanish-American War in 1895. The others are Fort Worden at Point Wilson and Fort Casey on Whidbey Island.

The late-nineteenth-century coastal defense fort at Fort Worden is now a state park.

G 1 hour 30 minutes (1 hour)

To the west is Port Townsend, the only town on Puget Sound that didn't start out as a sawmill town. The residents' dream was to see their town become the major seaport of the area, but when the railroads located their terminals in Seattle and Tacoma, the dream died and Port Townsend remained the charming little town it is today.

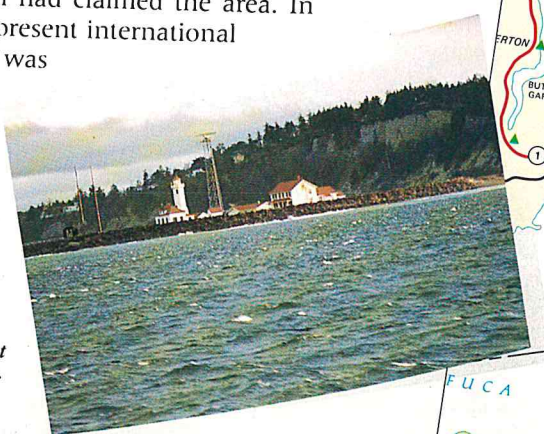
H

Point Wilson is the last point to the west as we leave Puget Sound for the Juan de Fuca Strait. The strait was discovered in 1592 and named after the pilot who first charted it. In 1775, Bruno Hezeta came ashore and claimed the area for Spain, but by the 1790s the British had claimed the area. In 1873 the present international boundary was agreed upon.



Lightbouse at Point Wilson.

I 2 hours (30 minutes)

To the east are the San Juan Islands, which consist of 172 individually named islands. Discovered in 1791 by Spanish explorers, many landmarks on the islands still carry Spanish names. The San Juans joined the United States in 1842.

J

Settlement of Victoria began in 1843 when Fort Victoria was built by the Hudson's Bay Company. In 1868, Victoria became the capital of the Crown Colony of Vancouver Island and British Columbia. Today, the city's population is about 250,000. □

CUSTOMS

The Clipper's on-board gift and duty-free shop offers an attractive selection of high quality items, souvenirs designed to give you lasting pleasure as well as pleasant memories of your holiday.

These include official Clipper crew sweatshirts and polo shirts, and tote bags that won't fall apart before you get your treasures home. The duty-free items include a generous range of spirits and liqueurs, as well as fine perfumes. You'll get a complete list and order form from the cabin attendant, enabling you to make all your purchases without leaving your seat, if you wish. Alternatively, you can visit the shop at the rear of the main deck to look at the items, then place your order there. An announcement will be made just before your arrival in port, requesting that you pick up your purchases.

Before buying, you should be aware of the customs regulations that apply to you. If you are entering Canada, you are allowed to bring duty- and tax-free gifts not exceeding $40 CDN and 40 ounces of liquor for your own use. Upon reentering the United States, you must have remained out of the country for 48 hours in order to qualify for the liquor exemption. For other goods, if your stay has been less than 48 hours, you may bring back $25 worth of goods without paying duty. After 48 hours, your exemption is increased to $400. Americans should note that purchases of up to $1,000 are subject to only 10 percent duty (or eight percent, for goods made in Canada), which at the current rate of exchange between the two currencies still makes shopping in Victoria an attractive proposition.

If you are entering the United States, you are allowed to bring gifts not exceeding $100 US, plus one litre of spirits for your own use, provided your stay is at least 72 hours and it's been six months since your last application for this exemption. Upon reentering Canada, you must have remained out of the country for 48 hours to qualify for the 40-ounce liquor exemption. For other goods, if your stay has been longer than 24 hours, you may bring back $20 worth of goods. After 48 hours, you qualify for a $100 exemption, and once a year you may declare $300 worth of duty-free goods, providing your stay is seven days or longer. All returning residents are asked to fill out declaration forms. These will be brought to you by a member of the cabin crew. If you have any questions, do not hesitate to ask for help.☐

The main difficulty facing visitors to Seattle is choosing between the array of attractions in the downtown waterfront area. To make the most of your time, you may want to hop aboard a Metro bus (free in this area) or one of the historic waterfront street cars (a dollar 6 - 9AM and 3 - 6PM, 75 cents non-peak times).

SEATTLE on foot

If your appreciation of a place is enhanced by immersing yourself in a little of its history, start out in Pioneer Square 1 at Doc Maynard's Restaurant 2, where you can book yourself a place on the Underground Tour. It takes you on a journey through a whole section of old Seattle that was left underground when the street level was raised following the 1889 fire. The guides are excellent, and the history is spiced up with humour to make it far more memorable than the textbook variety.

On the waterfront itself, you'll find a wealth of fascinating stores and exhibits, including a 90-year-old curiosity shop on Pier 54 3, a restaurant with an award-winning display of historic photographs on Pier 54 4 and a Maritime Exhibit on Pier 57 5. Pier 70 6 boasts one of the oldest restored wooden piers in America.

If you're artistically inclined, you may well spend your whole day in and around Pioneer Square, as it is brimming with very good galleries and ethnic and contemporary stores. The Elliot Bay Bookstore 7 is a wonderfully relaxing place for browsing that has a unique café/library in its cellar. The free community newspapers downstairs and an excellent selection of guides to the Northwest upstairs will have you planning your vacations here for years to come.

If you have children, include a visit to the Aquarium on Pier 59 8, where a series of diverse aquatic habitats are displayed so as to excite and involve youngsters. The Underwater Dome recreates the sensation of standing on the ocean floor, while on the same pier, the Omnidome 9 presents state-of-the-art films documenting such spectacular events as the Mount St. Helens eruption (call 622-1868 for showtimes).

With or without children, you'll want to consider taking the monorail (60 cents) from Fifth Avenue and Pine Street to Seattle Center 10, if only to enjoy the magnificent view from the revolving restaurant atop the famous Space Needle. The Pacific Science Center here features numerous programs for kids, and the hands-on approach to scientific experiments is as much fun for adults as it is for kids. Seattle Center also includes a children's museum, a carnival with rides, the Northwest Craft Center and scores of ethnic shops and restaurants.

And no one can afford to miss the celebrated Pike Place Public Market 11 at the foot of Pike street. This seven-acre national historic district on the waterfront is bustling with vitality; the pungent smells of coffee and spices waft through the air as you wander among hundreds of small shops, ethnic restaurants and fresh fish and vegetable stalls, amid artists, craftspeople and musicians.

The Pike Hillclimb 12 is the most accessible way up to the market from the waterfront.

A bus to Chinatown 13, officially known as the international district, will take you to the fascinating Wing Luke Memorial Museum 14, which focuses primarily on folk art of all the Asian cultures. You'll also find an abundance of exotic shops and restaurants.

For further information, the Visitors' Bureau 15, at 666 Stewart Street, in the Vance Hotel, is helpful.☐

The Hotel Seattle was built on the triangular block bordered by James Street, Yesler Way and Second Avenue in 1889. This picture dates from its heyday at the turn of the century. The hotel was later demolished and replaced by what irate citizens refer to as "the sinking ship garage," a structure which became a rallying cry for their efforts to preserve historically valuable buildings.

Seattle had something of a struggle to come by its name, since Chief Sealth was not at all sure he wanted to share his name with the city. That he was eventually persuaded it would be an honour says something for the relationship that existed between him and the first mid-nineteenth century settlers.

The area's extensive waterways and wealth of rain forest timber made it an enticing prospect to those early settlers, even if the eight-acre townsite, surrounded by mudflats and cliffs, may have seemed a little daunting. A glance at a map of downtown Seattle illustrates clearly what independent thinkers the settlers were. Each had a separate notion of how the streets should be laid out in his individual claim, and at the intersections of each you find curious five-way junctions and oddly shaped buildings.

Old Seattle was built of wood, on stilts, in the area of what is now Pioneer Square. It quickly became a confusing, ramshackle logging town in a sea of mud. Mercifully, some say, it was destroyed by fire in 1889, giving the city fathers the chance to rebuild the city the way they wanted to. This time they built imposing brick and stone structures and made plans to plant thousands of trees to beautify the city.

But the gold rush of the 1890s proved too much for the entrepreneurial spirit of the residents, and grace and beauty gave way to hundreds of illegally constructed wooden shacks, hastily thrown together to take advantage of the thousands of miners passing through on their way to the Klondike. Some of the outfitting companies remain today, supplying campers and explorers of the Northwestern wilderness.

The beautiful new town was turned into a slum, a turn of events that had been foreseen by the Metropolitan Building Company, which located its new building in what was to become

PLACE PIGALLE RESTAURANT AND BAR

81 Pike Street, In the Pike Place Market
Seattle, Washington, 98101
(206) 624-1756

In the Pike Place Market overlooking Puget Sound and the Olympic Mountains, Place Pigalle is a hidden treasure. At lunch, business people and daydreamers set their own pace. At night, the accent is on intimacy; linen and candlelight reflect leisurely dining. Menus highlight seasonal Northwest ingredients emphasising local seafood, meats, game and farmers' produce. Desserts are made daily.

The bar is equally impressive. The award-winning wine list boasts over 100 selections including rare madeira and port; local micro-brewery ales are served on draft; and the liquor list features akvabit, eaux-de-vie, single malt scotch, cognac and grappa.

The critics sum it up: "Always dishes have been artful, always entertaining, always fresh — disarmingly successful." "Nearly the best food in Seattle."

Enjoy the fun, turn of the century decor, including a restored trolly car to dine in, and friendly service that has made this a Seattle family favorite since 1970. House specialties include lasagna for $6.90 and baked chicken with spaghetti for $6.75. Both delicious meals are served with tossed green salad, a whole loaf of hot sourdough bread, choice of beverage, and spumoni ice cream. Dinners are offered weeknights from 5 to 10 PM and until 11 PM Friday and Saturday, open 4 to 10 PM on Sundays. Also located in Tacoma, on 17th and Jefferson, call 383-2214.

the new heart of Seattle. Old Seattle remained an infamous skid road for 50 years, until the job of restoration was undertaken by a new generation.

Seattle is today a vibrant, multi-ethnic town, its fortunes tied not only to the logging industry, but also to Boeing, which opened its first airplane factory there in 1916. Both the Museum of Flight and the Museum of History and Industry offer creative ways to experience and better understand Seattle's past. Chief Sealth's birthplace, Blake Island, has been made a state park, and a four-hour cruise allows you to become an honoured guest in an authentic Indian village, sampling the food, dance and crafts of the Northwest Coast natives.

Lake Washington has been connected to Puget Sound by a series of locks and salmon ladders which can be viewed from the Carl S. English Gardens, named for the man who spent a lifetime collecting its trees, shrubs and flowers. Other outdoor attractions for those with a naturalist bent include the Japanese Tea Garden, the Washington Park Arboretum and Woodland Park Zoo, a famous natural zoo.

But the real excitement for visitors lies in Seattle's cultural and culinary diversity, a richness that reflects both the city's size and its population mix. An arts hotline, 477-ARTS, provides up-to-date information on more than 40 cultural institutions and their events, including theatre, dance, music, art, film festivals and literary readings. Seattle is known for its jazz and blues, and it boasts thousands of places to eat. It also satisfies a number of specialty interests, such as Asian antiques. Art, furnishings, textiles and clothing can be found both in public museums and in private galleries.

Chinatown offers special tours which include a dim sum lunch or an eight-course banquet in a community which now includes Vietnamese, Cambodian and Laotian citizens and businesses. Beyond the downtown area, the Capitol Hill district, surmounted by the Seattle Art Museum and bisected by Broadway, is also worth visiting. Lying between Seattle University and the Community College, it comprises a lively array of imaginative specialty stores, restaurants and galleries. There is no doubt that Seattle is a city which amply repays the effort of getting to know it. □

Come on up to the Space Needle.

To the observation deck, where the 12 display panels of the new Compass Northwest® take you beyond what you can see—behind the scenes of the Pacific Northwest. In addition to a spectacular observation deck, we have two fine restaurants, both of which revolve.

THE EDGEWATER INN

Pier 67, 2411 Alaskan Way,
Seattle, WA 98121-1398
(206) 728-7000 Fax (206) 441-4119

The "new" Edgewater Inn has graced Seattle's waterfront since 1962. Constructed for the World's Fair it remains Seattle's only waterfront hotel. Newcomers and natives both regard it as a unique city landmark.

A change in ownership and a major facelift in 1989 gave our Emerald City a Pacific Northwest lodge decor property. White pine interiors, French doors and river rock fireplaces accent the hotel's lobby and public areas. The backdrop of Elliott Bay and the Olympic Mountains is irresistable. Visitors and local residents alike are charmed by this comfortable setting that offers the "friendliest" service in town. A visit to Ernie's Restaurant or our majestic Olympic Ballroom for a catered private event would be memorable to anyone's palate. We season with sunset.

Visit us soon. A trolley ride, stroll through the market or short drive will put you in another world — right in your own backyard!

YE OLDE CURIOSITY SHOP

Pier 54 Alaskan Way, Seattle, WA 98104
(206) 682-5844

Ye Olde Curiosity Shop, established in 1899, is still owned and operated by the fourth generation of the same family. Millions of residents and tourists have shopped and browsed among the nautical specialties, totem poles, carved ivories, scrimshaw, Indian and Eskimo art, oriental curios, antiques, jewelry, and imports from around the world including Russian Matreshka dolls and hand-painted laquer boxes. Come see "Sylvester" (the 6-foot, perfectly preserved mummy), the Lord's Prayer engraved on a grain of rice, man-eating shark's jaws, a two-headed calf and genuine shrunken human heads!

This world-famous "must see" shop is located on Pier 54, next to Ivar's Acres of Clams seafood restaurant, in the heart of the Seattle waterfront.

Be sure to stop in to their other two locations: the Waterfront Landmark, at Pier 55, where you'll find nautical specialties, moccasins, collectables and delicious homemade fudge; the Seattle Landmark in the Seattle Center House, specializing in the arts, gifts and foods of the Pacific Northwest.

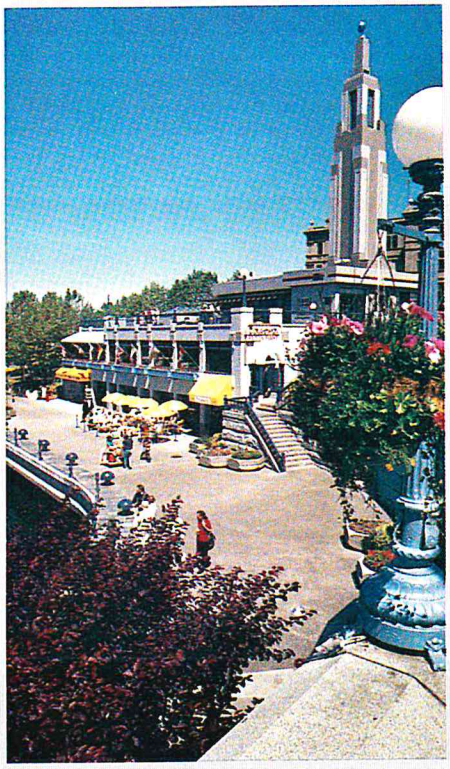
Victoria on FOOT



Victoria is a walker's paradise. Its wide, flower-filled streets, charming alleys, grand old buildings, uncluttered views and leisurely atmosphere make it one of Canada's most relaxing cities to explore on foot.

For a complete display of attractions, start at the Tourist Information Centre 1 next to the Clipper dock on Wharf Street. From the patio here you can look across the harbour to the Parliament Buildings 2, the old CPR terminal which is now the Royal London Wax Museum 3, the Royal British Columbia Museum across the street 4 and, of course, the newly renovated Empress Hotel 5, with the Miniature World attraction at its north end 5A.

The Museum is one of the best in the world, having succeeded in making the lives of the early Indian peoples and white settlers of B.C. an unforgettable experience. Behind the Empress on Douglas Street, café tables at the Crystal Garden 6 overlook rare tropical plants, birds and animals. This is where Victorian socialites used to gather around a saltwater swimming pool.

Back on Government Street, you are in the heart of the old Victoria shopping district, looking at facades which haven't changed for a century. Here you can browse among laces, linens, crystal, British woollens, knives, tobacconist goods and books, in interiors that make you feel as if time has stopped.

If you're an antique lover, you can spend an entire day on Fort Street — Antique Row 7 — and if you walk the extra few blocks up the hill past some fine heritage houses, you'll reach the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria 8, a peaceful haven on Moss Street housing a very good Asian collection and gift shop. A few more blocks up the hill and you come to historic Craigdarroch Castle 9. A labour of love, Robert Dunsmuir built the castle in the late 1800's for his wife.

Returning downtown, Yates and View Streets offer a variety of contemporary shops, while Johnson and Pandora Streets are home to a more diverse collection of vintage shops, pawn shops and unusual boutiques. Between Johnson and Pandora, beautifully renovated nineteenth-century buildings make Market Square 10, with its shops, restaurants and open courtyard, the hub of the area.

One block further you'll find the glorious Gates of Harmonious Interest on Fisgard Street, marking the entrance to Chinatown 11. Don't miss Fan Tan Alley 12, a tiny gap between Johnson and Fisgard where the opium and gambling dens of days gone by have been replaced by artists' studios. This is a wonderful area for inexpensive and exotic shopping and eating.

Returning along Wharf Street, you can either go down to the waterfront at the Johnson Street Bridge 13 for a relaxing stroll among the boats, or continue to Bastion Square 14. The latter is the site of the original Fort Victoria and includes a Maritime Museum and an elm tree that dates from the turn of the century. The Emily Carr Gallery 15 is unobtrusively located on the corner of Fort and Wharf. As well as films and fascinating exhibits of Victoria's most famous artists' work, the gallery sells reproductions and prints of old Victoria from the Provincial Archives at reasonable prices, making them great souvenirs or gifts.

If you only have a few hours, you might like to consider taking one of the horse and carriage tours or renting a bicycle, in which case you could include James Bay and Oak Bay in your itinerary — maps and information are available at the Tourist Information Centre.□

Victoria's Inner Harbour was once the site of much commercial activity. In 1885, William Pendray built his home (site 1, circled, on the map on page 25) at 309 Belleville Street, partly because this was a fashionable residential neighbourhood (Robert Dunsmuir lived here prior to building Craigdarroch Castle), and partly because of its proximity to his soapworks. This Queen Anne-style house (photo 1), designed by prominent architect Thomas Hooper, is both picturesque and grand. The topiary birds in the garden are a local landmark. The interior features lavish woodwork and elaborately painted ceilings.

Thomas Hooper's own house (2) is located at 243 Kingston. Built in 1910, the house has been moved from its original corner location, but still features some of the finest art glass in the city (photos 2A and 2B). The residesigned by Hooper. Built in 1889, it features the art glass and ornamental detail that became associated with Hooper's name.

The Parliament Buildings (4) were designed by F. M. Rattenbury, the architect who designed many of the important commercial buildings in this area. The buildings were inspired by the British colonial architecture of India (photos 4A and 4B) and built in two stages, the first between 1893 and 1897, and the second between 1912 and 1916. The first phase cost nearly twice the original estimate of $500,000.

4A

4B

The CPR steamship terminal (5) at 468 Belleville Street was designed by Rattenbury and his partner, P. L. James, in 1924. Built in the classical revival style, it's one of the most elegant buildings in the city. Note the crowned heads of Neptune and the crossed tridents on the corners of the building, and the dolphins above the entrance (photos 5A and 5B).

The Empress Hotel (6), built between 1907 and 1929, is another Rattenbury design. It is built in the château style that was the signature of CPR hotels across Canada. Rattenbury's interpretation includes Elizabethan and Gothic elements (photo 6A). Since the building stands on what was once part of the Inner Harbour, it had to be constructed on a series of piles driven 125 feet into the ground. Rattenbury's place in history has been ensured not only by the magnificence of his buildings, but also by the sordid way in which he died — murdered by the family chauffeur, who was his wife's lover. Rattenbury's life has been the subject of books and plays.

Conference Centre is one of the most beautiful buildings built in Victoria in many years (photo 6C). It does not attempt to compete with the hotel's soaring rooflines, instead nestling in close and tying in brilliantly with both the hotel and the Crystal Garden (8), which is across the street at 713 Douglas Street. Built in 1925 to a design by Rattenbury and James, the Crystal originally housed the world's largest saltwater swimming pool, three ballrooms, a mezzanine tearoom, Turkish baths, offices, and club rooms.

Around the corner on Belleville, past the lawn bowling green, at 626 Blanshard Street is the Church of Our Lord (9, photo 7), designed by John Teague in 1874. It is a fine and rare example of Carpenter Gothic architecture. The hall next door was designed by Samuel Maclure, an important and prolific architect in Victoria and Vancouver.

The old St. Ann's Academy (10, photos 8A and 8B), at 835 Humboldt Street, was built in three stages, in 1871, 1886, and 1913. This school was run by a teaching order of nuns. The Quebecois style of architecture is a

The Fairfield Health Centre, originally St. Joseph's Hospital (11), at 800 Humboldt Street, was designed by Thomas Hooper in 1876. Hooper was also responsible for the 1913 addition to St. Ann's. The hospital building (photos 9A and 9B) is a fitting neighbour for the academy, as their porticos and spires echo across the green space between them.

The Union Club (12), at 805 Gordon Street, was built in 1912 in the beaux arts style. Note the fine terra cotta details, including panels of cherubs (photo 10).

The Belmont building at Humboldt and Government (13, photo 11) was the first reinforced concrete building in the city. Originally built as a hotel but always used as offices, it has unique corner bay windows that offer fine views of the Inner Harbour.

The Tourist Information Centre (14) at 812 Wharf Street was originally a garage. Built in art deco style in 1931, its 80-foot tower houses a 10,000,000-candlepower beacon (photo 12) designed to guide aviators at night.

from 1876 and is a rare example of the Second Empire style.

The Temple building (17), at 535 Fort Street, dates from 1893 and was designed by Samuel Maclure, who was perhaps the finest residential architect to practise in Victoria. This is his only surviving commercial structure, and it shows the influence of Louis Sullivan, the prolific American architect. Note the faces in the terra cotta decoration (photo 15).

tures a richly decorated interior highlighted by a soaring ceiling.

The building of E. A. Morris, Tobacconist (20, photo 18), at 1116 Government Street, was designed by Thomas Hooper in 1892. Its Georgian facade houses an extraordinary original interior featuring panelling, bevelled mirrors, a walk-in humidor, and a Mexican onyx electrolier. The city is fortunate that two of Hooper's lavish commercial interiors, this one and that of Rogers' Chocolates, have survived in their original states.

The château style that Rattenbury lavished on the Empress Hotel was used to equally good effect in the bank

Bastion Square, which overlooked the shipping activities in the Inner Harbour, contains some of the finest nineteenth-century buildings in the city (photo 20). The Provincial Courthouse (22) of 1889 now houses the Maritime Museum. This towered and turreted building features an open-cage elevator. The Board of Trade building (23) of 1892 is at 31 Bastion Square. Its facade incorporates floral ornamentation, elaborate brickwork, a superb arched entranceway, and sophisticated window massing. A corner tower once stood on the roof, allowing businessmen to watch the ship traffic in the Inner Harbour.

20

21

Wharf Street (25) was once the hub of the city's commercial activities and the site of Fort Victoria. This area boomed during the gold rush, when Victoria was the point of departure for many infused with gold fever. Richard Carr, father of Emily Carr, operated a grocery here. Many nineteenth-century warehouses survive, some sporting elaborate cast-iron facades imported from San Francisco (photo 22). Victoria businessmen were quick to respond to the demand for cast-iron storefronts; a close examination of those on Wharf Street reveals manufacturer's logos indicating that they were soon being produced by Albion Ironworks, owned by the Dunsmuir family. The buildings on Wharf Street between Fort and Yates date from the 1860s, '70s, and '80s.

building of 1896, and go down Waddington Alley. Note the wooden paving blocks and the high curbs with metal edges that protected them from damage by carriage wheels. You are now on Johnson Street and in the heart of Victoria's Old Town. These stores and hotels flourished during the days of the gold rush. The building at 537 Johnson Street (26) housed Wille's Bakery from 1887 to 1976. The Colonial Metropole Hotel (27), at 541 - 545 Johnson, was one of the first buildings in the Old Town to be restored for residential use.

The Milne building (28) of 1891, at 546 - 548 Johnson, and the Strand Hotel (29) of 1892, 550 - 554 Johnson, are two important architectural components of Market Square. Bounded by Pandora Avenue, Store Street, and Johnson Street, Market Square was designed by Nick Bawlf, who also designed the Victoria Conference Centre. This development marked the beginning of the revitalization of Old Town in the 1970s. The heart of the square is courtyard space that was formerly accessible only to the inhabitants of the rooming houses that occupied this area.

Walk through the square to Pandora and up the street to Fan Tan Alley (30). Now home to retailers, artists, and small businesses, this alley was once the core of the gambling activities that flourished in Chinatown.

Victoria's Chinatown (photo 23) was the largest Chinatown in North America and is rich in architectural treasures. Note the recessed balconies on many of the buildings. Of particular interest is the Chinese school (31, photo 24) at 636 Fisgard Street. This 1909 building, with Italianate, Moorish, Gothic, and Oriental motifs, is one of the most exotic buildings in Victoria.

The lives of Indians, British, Scots, Americans and Chinese are intertwined in the history of Vancouver Island, but it is the British influence that has prevailed in Victoria. This once bustling international port had all the potential to become another thriving, American style business centre, but became instead a languid and charming city of flowers and afternoon tea.

Victoria

To the Indians who had lived here for some 10,000 years, the first ship that sailed into their waters in the late eighteenth century was a source of utter astonishment — "a floating island complete with dead trees [masts] and ghosts [white men]." When James Douglas of the Hudson's Bay Company sailed around Vancouver Island in 1842, he chose the southern tip of the Island for the site of the new fur trading fort, since its rolling grasslands and natural harbour looked suitable for farming. The Indians were enthusiastic about the prospect of supplying furs, little realizing the devastating impact this arrangement would have on their culture.

Today, the Royal Victoria Boat Race is held each June in the Inner Harbour and nearby Elk Lake.

Concerned about American expansionist dreams, England made Vancouver Island a Crown Colony and encouraged English immigration, using the Hudson's Bay Company Fort as the capital. The first Governor sent out by the Crown was Sir Richard Blanshard. Expecting to govern a colony of English, he was so dismayed at having to live among Indians and Hudson's Bay Company traders that he requested a recall within months of his arrival. The post was then offered to James Douglas. Even in those days of primitive conditions, Douglas entertained his fellow officers on white linen with silver and crystal, and tolerated no frivolity at his table.

Until World War I, Victoria remained the hub of what was still a predominantly Pacific maritime commerce, trading canned salmon, lumber and furs. By the time Vancouver took precedence, by virtue of its rail links to the east, Victoria had 50 years to establish its right to the seat of government and had spent $1,000,000 on parliament buildings to prove it.

The gold rush of 1858 brought close to 20,000 prospectors through Victoria, most of them American, and for a while the city became almost indistinguishable from San Francisco. In 1869, in fact, a group of American businessmen went so far as to petition — unsuccessfully — for annexation of Vancouver Island by the United States. At the same time, the establishment of a British Royal Navy base at Esquimalt did a great deal to reinforce the British flavour of the settlement, supplying a steady stream of cricket-playing husbands for its young women!

The gold rush also brought the first Chinese to Victoria, and it wasn't long before their entrepreneurial spirit and industriousness saw their businesses outdoing all others, except the Hudson's Bay Company.

The Chinese were also the source of the domestic servants without which the English society houses could not have survived. Many of these houses were built by Samuel McLure, an architect who introduced a style of architecture at the turn of the century that, although American in spirit, was very British on the outside, featuring Tudor exteriors with lovely gardens.

Today, it is hard to imagine that the site of the Empress Hotel was once a tidal mudflat which had become the favoured garbage dump. It was the young architect Frances Rattenbury who recognized the site's extraordinary potential. Rattenbury had won an 1892 competition to build the Parliament Buildings when he was but 25 and fresh from England. Visitors cruising into Victoria's Inner Harbour are in a strategic position to see examples of this young man's imagination; his buildings, which include the Royal London Wax Museum and the Crystal Garden, make it one of the prettiest city harbours in the world.

Victoria's decline as the natural hub of B.C.'s trade has contributed to its identity as a place where the quality of life and making time for tea are what count. Its climate — less rain and more sunshine than virtually anywhere else on B.C.'s coast — makes Victoria an ideal home for gardeners, and Beacon Hill Park and the Butchart Gardens are year-round sources of pleasure to residents and visitors alike.

Many eighteenth- and nineteenth-century homes have been preserved as heritage buildings. Some have been restored and are open to the public, including Craigflower Manor, a farmhouse built in 1853 that overlooks The Gorge; Point Ellice House on the Inner Harbour, the ancestral home of Peter O'Reilly, one of B.C.'s founders; Helmcken House beside the Royal British Columbia Museum; and Craigdarroch Castle, an opulent mass of stone and stained glass that Robert Dunsmuir built for his wife (it was completed only after his death in 1889). Christ Church Cathedral on Quadra Street is a good example of ecclesiastical architecture and is worth visiting.

Victoria boasts a thriving cultural community. In addition to the entertainment provided by the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, the University of Victoria School of Music, the McPherson Foundation and the Victoria Conservatory of Music, the annual Victoria International Festival draws performers from all over the world for a summer of music in this city of boats, beaches and bed-and-breakfast.

Besides the Royal British Columbia Museum and the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, there are numerous private galleries which feature contemporary, Indian and folk art, and theatre lovers have the offerings of several companies to choose from. Shopping and dining are a pleasant mix of the old and the new, with Oak Bay offering its own village atmosphere and enough tweeds and tea to compete with the Empress herself. □

STOPS ALONG T

As a service to travellers wanting to stop at other points, Clipper Navigation has added another catamaran this year. Victoria Clipper III will travel a slightly different route than our other ships, making scheduled stops at Port Townsend on the Olympic Peninsula and Friday Harbor on San Juan Island.

Known as Washington's Victorian seaport and the bed-and-breakfast capital of Washington State, Port Townsend is located on the northern tip of the Quimper Peninsula, 24 miles north of the Hood Canal Bridge.

Port Townsend is the only center in the Puget Sound area that didn't start as a sawmill town. It was named by Captain Vancouver in 1792, and called a "safe and spacious harbor." Because of its strategic location at the entrance to Puget Sound, Port Townsend was designated the port of entry for the U.S. Customs district in 1854. By the 1880s, the town and harbor were prospering. The population reached a peak of 7,000, and many of the beautiful buildings we see today were built. The seaport dwindled in 1890, when the railroads located their terminals in Seattle and Tacoma. Over the next few years, however, the establishment of several coastal artillery stations, military training bases and a paper mill bolstered the local economy.

Today, Port Townsend retains the Victorian flavor of its golden years. Roughly 40 buildings near the harbor on Water Street are listed on the National Register of Historic Places. At the far end of the street, the Jefferson County Historical Museum, built in 1891, displays Victorian memorabilia and hundreds of photos from the town's early years. In and around Water Street are dozens of antique shops, including the well-known Port Townsend Antique Mall. Port Townsend also boasts a number of lovingly restored Victorian and pre-Victorian residences, including Rothschild House. This home, which includes an immaculate rose garden and restored herb garden, is situated in one of Washington's smallest state parks, measuring 50 by 200 feet.

The San Juan Islands consist of 172 individually named islands, which were discovered in 1791 by Spanish explorers. The mild weather and unspoiled, natural scenery draw an assortment of people, but are especially appealing to nature lovers, who enjoy everything from bird and whalewatching to hiking and cycling.

One of the most popular islands is San Juan Island itself. The Clipper docks at Friday Harbor, the commercial and governmental center of the San Juans. It's a small town with several museums, including the Whale Museum and the San Juan Historical Museum. The shops and attractions of Friday Harbor are easily explored on foot, and bicycle and moped rentals are also available. The road from Friday Harbor to Roche Harbor, on the northern part of the island, is well surfaced with wide shoulders for cycling.

Haro Strait, on the west side of San Juan Island, is considered the best whalewatching spot on the West Coast. The state park at Limestone Point, in fact, was developed primarily for whale observation. The southwest coast of San Juan Island is important for another reason. Its exposure to southerly and westerly winds and swelling seas gives it a barren, almost treeless beauty.

To the north, western San Juan Island has a more pastoral look, and a number of parks and public beaches invite exploration. British Camp, a 520-acre site with restored buildings and displays, is a popular stopping point. □

Don't come to the Holland House Inn for more of Victoria's "Olde England Quainte Looke." Instead, come to Lance Olsen and Robin Birsner's bright and airy small hotel to enjoy their fine collection of paintings, sculpture, and drawings. Aware that one cannot live on aesthetics alone, the owners have complemented their art with antique and traditionally styled furniture, good lighting, comfortable beds, lots of flowers inside and out, and a varying full breakfast — baked eggs with ham and brie or German apple pancakes with spiced apples and maple yogurt were two recent options.

"What a breath of fresh air! Although we liked our visit to Victoria, we got sick of the erstaz Britannia that envelops everything except the superb Provincial Museum and this great place. We were delighted by our quiet room, complete with fireplace and good-sized bath. Our balcony proved a nice retreat before we braved the tourists at dinnertime, and the owners even served us our breakfast out there the next day. We were taken by some of the modern art which punctuates the rooms and the inn and were surprised to learn that much of it is done by Lance Olsen. In fact, the highlight of our stay was a lively art discussion over breakfast the next day." (SC) (re-printed from America's Wonderful Little Hotels and Inns).

One of her more famous guests was the world renowned Canadian artist, Emily Carr, who spent the last five years of her life as a resident at the James Bay Inn, just half a block from where she was raised as a child. Although off the beaten track, tucked away amid beautiful heritage homes, a short walk will have you to Beacon Hill Park, downtown, attractions, the Parliament Buildings, the famous Royal British Columbia Museum, or our beautiful Inner Harbour.

The Inn offers Victoria's oldest neighbourhood pub-style atmosphere and boasts the city's first Karaoke singing machine for added fun and entertainment. A fully licensed restaurant is also available.

Pier 67, 2411 Alaskan Way,
Seattle, WA 98121-1398

The "new" Edgewater Inn has graced Seattle's waterfront since 1962. Constructed for the World's Fair it remains Seattle's only waterfront hotel. Newcomers and natives both regard it as a unique city landmark.

A change in ownership and a major facelift in 1989 gave our Emerald City a Pacific Northwest lodge decor property. White pine interiors, French doors and river rock fireplaces accent the hotel's lobby and public areas. The backdrop of Elliott Bay and the Olympic Mountains is irresistable. Visitors and local residents alike are charmed by this comfortable setting that offers the "friendliest" service in town. A visit to Ernie's Restaurant or our majestic Olympic Ballroom for a catered private event would be memorable to anyone's palate. We season with sunsets.

Victoria, B.C. V8V 1V5
(604) 384-9995

Your stay at The Haterleigh will be a delightful discovery of charming Victorian romance and unexpected pampering.

Original stained glass windows, carefully restored plaster ceiling ornamentation, rich wood mouldings and antique furnishings create an authentic turn-of-the-century ambience. The Haterleigh was built in 1901 by architect Thomas Hooper as his personal residence, and is now a designated heritage building. Each of the six units has a private bath and is individually decorated. "Day Dreams" with romantic lace, flowers, double jacuzzi bath and candles may appeal to you, or perhaps "Secret Garden" with Olympic Mountain views from a private deck.

But The Haterleigh is more than a unique, exquisite old house. Lavish breakfasts, complimentary transportation from the Clipper dock and two-for-one getaway weekend specials are all standard. And the attractions of the Inner Harbour and downtown Victoria are within an easy stroll. Every room is lovingly restored, every meal is tastefully prepared, and every service graciously provided — just for you.
